

DAN MEYER at the GREENBRIER

THE GREENRIER CLASSIC 2010 PGA TOUR

July 26 - August 1, 2010

The FedEx Cup Series will be held at the Old White Course at The Greenbrier Resort in West Virginia. The Old White golf course has been host to the greatest golfers in the world, including Sam Snead, Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus, and Tom Watson.

Carleton Varney, President of Dorothy Draper & Co., commissioned this sculpture on behalf of the Greenbrier Resort to commemorate the PGA Greenbrier Classic, formerly known as The Buick Open. The Greenbrier, which has hosted presidents, royalty and the well heeled for over 150 years, has just undergone a massive restoration and modernizing project.

"Meyer's sculpture will add magic and interest to the setting at the clubhouse," Varney says.

This magnificent sculpture, which is 12 feet in height, embodies all the qualities Dan Meyer's work is known and loved for. Meyer creates lively and spirited sculptures in a kaleidoscope of lustrous colors and bold patterns.

In 1992, preceded by Andy Warhol and Romeo Britto, Meyer, was selected to be The Artist of the Year in the award winning Absolut Vodka advertising campaign. Meyer's work may be seen in numerous private and corporate collections including: Alabama Power and Light, The Everhart and Brevard Museums, First National Bank of Chicago, Harley Davidson Café, McDonalds Corporate Headquarters and the Palm Beach International Airport.
